← Photo from the same National Geographic article, showing the extreme primitiveness of the Tasaday people. They supposedly used stone-age axes and were unfamiliar with agriculture.
