

Forgeries, Fakes, Faith, and Hoaxes

The fossil record on which the evolution of man and animals depends is the source of many fabrications and misinterpretations. Some of these fabrications have been the result of hoaxes and forged fossils. Others have been the result of misinterpretation and distortion of the fossil evidence. In either case the result is the same; evolution is advanced at the expense of true science and honesty.

The examples shown on this display are only a small sampling of the acceptance of shoddy work and questionable fossils by the evolutionary establishment. There are literally hundreds of examples that could be used. The reason that these fossils/scenarios have been accepted is that evolution is considered to be an established fact much like gravity or mathematics. In reality evolution is a philosophy and is not subject to the same criteria as other branches of science.

Interestingly when a new breakthrough fossil is found, much fanfare is made in the popular media and scientific journals. On the other hand when this same fossil is found to be of dubious character or further study shows that it does not fit evolutionary dogma, it is quietly relegated to the back pages of obscurity.

Evolutionist will often say that the evolutionary branch of science is self-correcting—that eventually the bad fossils will be found out and eliminated. The question is not whether this occurs, the real question is how many fossils that are now accepted as genuine are in reality not genuine. Also, since evolution is such an interpretative science the problem is not the fossils, genuine or not, the real problem is the false conclusions.

Since the evolutionist so easily accepts these types of fossils this indicates that in reality evolution and its conclusions are a Science based on Faith
