

Normally when an organism dies, it decays before it can be buried and fossilized. Fossilization requires catastrophic events. The fish at the top was buried before it could finish its last meal. These fossil fish were fossilized in sedimentary rock. They were buried quickly and overlaid with other strata.